It's Baacckk!!

The chunky necklace has made a return! Big, bold and best of all beaded. It features all things natural- semi-precious stone, carved bone, wood, shell and resins. It's not all about the beads, however; take a look at what's holding them together. We are seeing rattail and rubber, leather and lace, ribbon and rope, chains, wires, metal and fabric...it appears that anything goes!! AND it's not all about the cording. Quantity counts just as much as quality, as in multiple strands worn neck to belly, and the more the merrier.

Indeed, the look is ALL about making a statement.

Needless to say, we at Beadworks are more than thrilled with the plethora of beads gracing the fashion world. It would appear that our customers agree. One such pleased soul dropped by recently sporting her mother's necklace purchased in New York- large metal animals, Indian glass and African trading beads strung on several strands of thick black fiber. Very bohemian. While scouting for beads to make a similar one for herself, she remarked that this trend was such a throwback to the eighties. "Beads are so huge right now- they are absolutely everywhere" she enthused adding (with more than a hint of relief in her voice :), "and I'm sooo... glad".

Hear! Hear!
